THE PARTICULAR BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Dear Sir,—I am exceedingly sorry that the brief reference to a slight misunderstanding in our little Baptist family, made in a report published by us in your columns some days since, should have laid you open to the admission of such a document as that contained in your issue of Friday. Personally, I should prefer to let the document pass for what it is, worth, without a word of reply; but, lest unanswered charges should be deemed unanswerable, perhaps your goodness and the patience of your readers will indulge me with a few lines.

Mr. Allen says that "the statements in our report imply certain things. It would have been fairer to have taken our own statements verbatim; and I must decline to be responsible for such implications as he finds in them. Such phrases as "untrue," "false imputation," "denounces as untrue," &c., are not usual salutations of Christians to one another; and in freely indulging in such a vocabulary, Mr. Allen and his friends cannot claim the excuse of copying from us.

The first point at issue between us seems to be respecting the registration of two ministers in the Hunter district. Mr. Allen asserts several times that these men sought recognition from him because they differed from us in doctrine and discipline. Is it not enough to answer that they never sought recognition from him until they had failed to secure it from us, and that in all the correspondence which passed between them and us, and which I have by me, there is not one word of complaint or of objection in regard to the doctrinal basis of the Union. As to our reasons for not recognising them, I may state here that we thought one of them possibly fitted for the work of an evangelist, but not suitable for registration as a minister; and the other was a complete stranger to our committee, coming, as he did, from another denomination in Queensland where ministers in Sydney we consulted respecting him, without obtaining satisfactory information, and therefore I declined to take part in his ordination until he had proved himself worthy by actual service among us. Both these men were so far "questionable" to us, simply on this negative ground; but they were both recognised by Mr. Allen without any such reference to us as friendly denominations are in the habit of making to one another in such cases.

The second issue turns upon the use of the terms "Particular" and "General," as applied to Baptists. In the May number of the "Earthen Vessel," an English Baptist organ of a peculiar character, Mr. Allen says that these new-made pastors, with himself and others, "have all been registered as Particular Baptists, distinct from General Baptists." Now, by this statement, he makes it appear that all Baptists in New South Wales who are not registered under the new designation belong to the section known at home as "General Baptists," and who number about 20,000 communicants. If so, Mr. Allen must permit me to correct him, for there is not a church in this colony that either does, or ever did, belong to this smaller but not less respectable section of our denomination. The fact is, that the terms "Particular" and "General," which were long the distinction between Calvinistic and Arminian Baptists, are being gradually allowed to lapse in England, and in most of our churches disciples of both schools are welcome on the common ground of allegiance to Jesus. There are, however, a few churches who still glory in these badges of the old controversy. They refuse to commune with even Baptists who do not belong to their order; they use Gadsby's collection of hymns in preference to the common and generally received Baptist Hymn Book. They denounce as heretics such world-renowned Baptist ministers as Robert Hall, Andrew Fuller, and John Foster; and though Mr. Spurgeon is usually deemed sufficiently Calvinistic, they declare his theology far too low for them. On all these points Mr. Allen and his people, I believe, agree with this section of English Baptists, as they differ from us, and differ from at least nine-tenths of the half million communicants who meet on the common platform of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland. But, notwithstanding these differences, all Baptists are just as welcome to the platform of our Union in this colony as they are to the common platform of our denomination at home. Our Union we are neither Calvinistic nor Arminian; neither high in doctrine nor low; neither open in communion nor close; some of our churches are the one and some are the other, but with our Congregational form of constitution, we claim and we can have no right to meddle with either the doctrine or the discipline of individual churches. But if these brethren prefer a separate organization, they have the right to take their own course. We have no objection to their registration—our only objection was to their appropriation of the term "Particular," which is the historical designation of all our churches in New South Wales, and of that large body at home to which we belong. If a new name were required to be placed on the roll of our Registrar-General, it would have been better to adopt a name that should indicate the difference between us; but as our Union declines to narrow its platform by registering itself as either Particular or General, there was nothing left for the Registrar-General to do but register the new body by any name which they should choose to assume and by whatever name they may care to be called, if only they succeed in our common work of winning souls for Jesus, "I therein rejoice, yea, and I will rejoice."

There is only one more statement which I need notice. Some of these brethren declare that they left our Union "because it is wanting in love and vital godliness." To this charge I must plead guilty; our ministers and our churches do sadly need more of these essentials of true religion. But I leave it for others to decide whether we are alone in this want, and whether our new denomination can draw near to the holy place, and "thank God that they are holier than we."

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,
JAS. GREENWOOD,
Secretary to the Baptist Union of New South Wales.

THE CHARITIES and the SEWING-MACHINE CONTROVERSY.

Every one must admit that the value and utility of a SEWING-MACHINE are greatly enhanced by the rate of speed it will turn out work from a

IMPORTANT TO MANUFACTURERS, FAMILIES, STOREKEEPERS, AND OTHERS.

It must be admitted that the value and utility of a Sewing Machine is greatly enhanced by the rate of SPEED it will turn out work, &c. With one revolution, or rise and fall of the treadle, the

SINGER FAMILY MACHINE makes 4½ stitches
Wheeler and Wilson's ditto 4½ ditto

SINGER'S MEDIUM MACHINE makes 4½ ditto
Ditto No. 2 Manufacturing ditto 4 ditto
Wheeler and Wilson No 0 ditto 3½ ditto.

The above figures, easily tested, prove two things—first that the SINGER EXCELS in SPEED, as well as in action; second that the statement of W. and W.'s agent is either ignorantly or wilfully devoid of truth.

Intending purchasers, note the following figures:—

In 1871 Singer and Co. sold ..	181,260	machines
" Wheeler and Wilson ..	127,835	"
Balance in favour of the "Singer"	53,425	"
In 1872 Singer and Co. sold ..	219,758	"
" W. and W.	174,088	"
Balance in favour of the "Singer"	45,670	"
Thus excelling in two years only	99,095	"

Importations from the two leading sewing-machine manufactories were as follows:—

Stanford and Co., agents for the Singer Co., 4719 cases, value £24,955.

Long and Co., agents for the W. and W. Co.,
1635 cases, value £8649

Showing a difference in favour of the Singer machine,
3084 cases, value £16,306.

A perusal of the above facts will show the fallacy of the silly challenge of the W. and W.'s agents.

INSOLVENCY COURT.
MONDAY.

BEFORE the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

IN THE ESTATE OF WILLIAM TREEN.

A special meeting for the examination of witnesses. Mr. S. C. Brown appeared for the official assignee; Mr. S. Stephen and Mr. Curtis for witnesses.

Michael Hegarty, sworn and examined by Mr. S. C. Brown: I know James Whelan; I am not residing with him, and never have been; I never slept at his house in my life; my wife went to Melbourne last Wednesday; I am not making preparations to leave the colony; I took a farewell benefit about four weeks ago preparatory to going to Melbourne, but I have been stopped owing to this affair; I do not know a man named John Dawson or John Cashman, employed at the Theatre Royal; there is only one man employed there; his name is James, but I don't know his surname; it is not either Dawson or Cashman; my wife went to Melbourne for the good of her health; I keep my horse out at Whelan's place, and I went there last Saturday; I was told there that there had been a person there inquiring for Mrs. Hegarty: I don't know that any person was told at my house that Mrs. Hegarty was at Whelan's; I was at Randwick races on the Saturday, then on the Thursday, and then on the Saturday; I know the first day was the Derby Day; I recollect swearing last Monday that no goods came to my place during the week preceding the Derby Day; I have since found I made a mistake, and have corrected it by affidavits; the way I found out I was wrong was thus—after my examination, when we got out of Court, Mr. Stephen said to me, "Don't you think you made a mistake" saying that no goods of Treen's came to your place between the 27th and 30th August;" I said "No, I am sure of it;" and he answered, "But they say they have the carter's receipts for these goods;" I said, "I am certain I haven't made a mistake;" however, I asked Whelan during the day, "Who was the last party you sold any goods to for Treen?" he answered, "To Mr. Hoins;" I then went up to Hoins with Whelan and asked him if he could tell me the date of the delivery of the last invoice of goods received by him from Treen; he pulled down his files, and all he had was a receipt dated 6th September; I asked him when he got the goods, and he said, "Some days back," but could not tell me the precise day; I then went down to his store to look at his store memorandum book, but I did not see it; I asked Whelan who had delivered the goods, and he described him as a sandy-whiskered man who had carted the last lot of goods; I met this man, whose name is Evans I believe, in Sussex-street, and he could not recollect the day, but promised to inquire of a woman whose furniture he had shifted on the same day; the next day he took me to this woman, and she produced her rent receipt-book, in which the first payment was entered on the 8th September; as she had been a week in the house, I reckoned that she had been moved on the 1st; that is how I fix the date in my affidavit of the 1st September; I fix the date of his leaving of the goods at my place at the 27th from what you said about the carter's receipts; I can also to some extent fix the time by my own memory, now that I know the dates to start from; they must have come there before the Monday when they were delivered to Hoins, and starting from this I fix the 27th to the best of my belief.

By his Honor: The goods must have been at my place at Paddington, and I have now a recollection of having seen them there.

By Mr. Brown: The man saying he took the things from my yard and delivered them to Hoins brought the thing to my memory; I remember swearing last Monday that I had no claim on any goods of Treen's up to the time of his taking me for the £200 mentioned in my receipts; that is true, and I swear so now; I say that the goods were left with me on the 27th, because I know that they must have been so some days prior to the 1st September; they were left with me because he wanted me to advance him some money; I did not give him an advance, as I did not think the goods were worth the sum he wanted; he wanted £200 or £240, and the goods were not worth more than £180, and I never gave him money until I had goods to the full value; I cannot say how the goods came for I was not there; I will not swear that they did not come on three separate days, nor will I swear that a load of goods was not delivered at my place on the 1st September; I will swear that there were none that I saw.

By his Honor: There were none that I was told of.

By Mr. Brown: The goods were in my yard when I left home on Monday morning, 1st September, and they were gone when I came back in the afternoon; I declined the advance because the goods were only worth £180.

By his Honor: I came to that conclusion from the prices I put upon the brandy and other things—the light and assorted spirits the goods were discovered in the yard just as they had been put down out of the dray; there were nearly 100 cases of goods; 80 or 90 to 100 cases; there were no labels or tickets on them that I saw; there were brands on them, but none to show out of whose store in Sydney they had come.

By Mr. Brown: I have recollected all this since my last examination; I did tell my attorney since the last examination that I lent Treen £200 on these goods, and that he repaid it to me on the second day of the races; I wish to explain this: I said £240, not £200, and I had been led into a mistake by a memorandum I had on a sheet of foolscap written out by Griffiths, with all the dates of all the money I lent to Treen, and when he paid it back; the entry of the £240 should have been put in the list in a different place, and it was that misled me; I found this out afterwards and rectified it, and brought it again down to Mr. Stephen and explained the mistake.

By his Honor: I will pledge my oath that I had no money transactions with Treen over these goods; he was annoyed when I said I would not advance the money, and said he should be off down to Sydney; and he jumped on his horse and went away.

By Mr. Brown: I showed my attorney the list I am speaking of.

(At this stage witness was allowed to leave the Court and consult with his attorney.)

James Whelan sworn and examined: I have read the evidence I gave on Monday last; I have sold goods for Treen since the 14th August; I sold one line of goods to Mr. Hoins, of the South Head Road, for £212 16s. 6d.; to the best of my belief I think I delivered them to him on the 30th August, on Saturday; and I fix this date because I got paid for them on Saturday, the 6th September, the last day of the races; on that day I got £160 from Hoins; all the goods came from Hegarty's place at Paddington, which I delivered to Hoins; he is a publican, and sells wholesale as well as retail; the goods were worth £212; to him to sell again; I gave the £160 to Treen; Hoins gave me a cheque on the branch bank on the South Head Road, and I got it cashed at once; I got it cashed in gold, and think I got a bag at the bank; nobody asked me to get it cashed in gold; I will swear that; I had no idea Treen was going away; I had previously had a good many business transactions with Treen; I don't know that he had a banking account; how could I possibly know it; I had no object that I am aware of in getting the cheque cashed in gold; I always got gold for my cheques; sometimes I may take some in notes, but nearly always gold; I gave the money to Treen the same day; I gave it to him at the races; I took £160 in gold in my pocket to Randwick, and gave it to him in his booth; in all my business transactions with Treen I never received a cheque from him, and never paid in a cheque to his account in any bank; I got the balance, £62 16s. 6d., on the Monday following as I was going into town; Mr. Hoins gave me a cheque for it and I got it cashed; I think I got it in gold, but am not certain; I kept that money and have it still.

By his Honor: Did you say one word about this at your last examination? No; but, if your Honor will allow me to explain, I would say that this transaction was solely with Treen, and had nothing to do with Hegarty; I was asked last time only about the matters through Hegarty.

By Mr. Brown: I have kept these £62 because I advanced Treen £50 on the 1st September; I will swear I made this advance; I did not say that I had no transaction of Treen's since the 14th August; what I said was, that I had no note of any; on the Monday Treen came to me and said that Hegarty would not advance the goods, and that I must sell the stuff for him, and he said, "As you will be selling the stuff and getting the money, you can make me an advance yourself;" I did so, and I think you will find by my cheque-book that there was a cheque to Treen on the 1st September; I did not tell you this last Monday, because I was not asked about it; I believe that cheque has been paid, but I will not swear it; I have every reason to believe it was paid, and will almost swear it; the balance £12 15s. 6d. I owe to the estate, less my commission on the sale; I do not know William Stretch; he introduced himself to me outside the Court; he spoke to me, and I asked him what he knew about the affair; I did not tell him that he had better not know anything about it; I will swear that I did not; £50 is an amount that I should recollect, as I am not in a position to lose it; I did not recollect about this last Monday, and I was not asked the question or I should have recollected it; it was repaid me out of the balance received from Hoins; when I was in the box last Monday I recollected the fact of having made the sale to Hoins, but not the dates; (witness' evidence on last Monday read to him); I did not then recollect this transaction; the sale to Hoins is entered in my memorandum-book, but not the date; I could not last Monday have told the date of this transaction; I can now, from what I have since learnt; I have sold some goods for Treen to Mrs. Tollis; I believe it was before the sale to Hoins, but will not swear it was or was not; I have a memo. of the sale to her, but it has no date; the goods in the memo. amount to £18, but there are other goods bringing it up to between £20 and £30; I received the money from her, but cannot say when, and paid it over to Treen; with regard to the cigars I was asked about at the last examination, I received 1600 from Hegarty on behalf of Treen, and I sold one thousand for £6, and the rest at 13s. per 100; I paid this money over to Treen after I told them; I think this was before the races; I have not sold any goods to John Austin, and never knew of any goods going to him; I have seen him outside the Court, and spoken to him; I went with the vans to deliver the goods to Hoins—there were four van loads—four or five; I have sold goods for Treen to Hoins, with whom I have had three or four transactions, to Thomas M'Master, to Mrs. Tollis, to Mr. Hart, in Market-street, to Miss Smith, of

CONTINENTAL NEWS.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT "STELLA.")

PARIS, AUGUST 8.

THE SHAH OF PERSIA.

THE "King of Kings," whom republican Paris has been entertaining with a real, magnificence, and goodwill of the most decided character, leaves us to-day, to the great relief of the business portion of the population, who complain that his presence put a complete stop to all commercial transactions, excepting those minor industries which "make hay" in the sunshine of public fêtes and rejoicings.

To chronicle the doings and sayings of the Shah and his party, and those to which their presence has given rise, since the date of my last, would require something like the extent of a good-sized volume, for Paris has been completely carried away by the incidents of the reception given to his Persian Majesty, who has become a prime favourite with its somewhat fickle-minded population, which, moreover, had been so long without anything in the shape of a fête that it has gone into the long succession of magnificences, now come to an end, with all the delight with which a hungry schoolboy, after doing penitence on dry bread, would throw himself upon a tray full of raspberry tarts unexpectedly brought within his reach.

The presence of the Oriental monarch has really given back something of its old physiognomy to "the caravansérai of Europe." The Imperial carriages and servants in the well-known livery of green and gold, the activity of so many well-known functionaries of the empire, to whom the arrangements for the personal comfort and convenience of the Royal guest have been confided, the stir and bustle of the preparations for the splendid fêtes of the past fortnight, the arrival of enormous crowd by every railway, the turning out of the whole town to witness the splendid spectacles got up in honour of a sovereign, and the grouping of all that is powerful or distinguished under the present régime around one central figure, recipient of honours and attentions on the part of all that is now highest in the land, have restored to this capital, for a few days, so much of its former appearance that one could hardly realise, on watching the holiday-making of the whole population, the vast changes that separate us from the period when the former heads of all this display were the pivot on which turned all the various magnificence in which Paris has been revelling again after its long fast.

The people of Paris have, very naturally, derived a feeling of satisfaction from the fêtes in question beyond the mere pleasure of the excitement thus created, and the splendid spectacles in which they have had their share. The review of last Friday was well calculated to flatter their pride in the strength and discipline of the military forces of France, reassembled so rapidly after their apparent annihilation so short a time ago; for a greater number of troops were displayed than had taken part in the grand review of 1867, in honour of the Czar, and their appearance, accoutrements, and action were as near perfection as such matters can be, and the enthusiasm of the vast army of spectators, roughly estimated here at half a million, broke forth in cries of unusual vigour and vivacity as each new "arm" appeared on the scene, the reconstituted regiments that had suffered most severely in the late war being especially remarked and saluted with a sort of frenzy by the crowd. A more splendid spectacle was never presented to the admiring eyes of this region; and the scene was in every respect magnificent. The lady spectators in the neighbourhood of the old Imperial Tribune (where the marshal and the duchess his wife, occupied, with the Shah, three seats of honour, with a brilliant surrounding of dignitaries) were dressed with the utmost richness and elegance, and were examined by the Shah, as usual, with the active and intelligent curiosity which he brings to bear on everything that comes in his way, and which probably is never more active than when the position and relations of the two sexes in Europe are the object of his observation. It may give some idea of the animation of the capital on the occasion in question, to state that the railways ran extra trains every five minutes, and that the stream of carriages, returning from the review, four abreast, was four hours in passing any given point of the way.

The races, got up with such spirit by the leaders of the Jockey Club, were equally successful in their way, and the assembled crowds appeared to take as lively an interest in the Shah as the latter took in the races, which, however, are not altogether a novelty for him, as races on a smaller scale, are run every year under his auspices, at Teheran. Isabelle, the flower girl of the Jockey Club (the only vendor of flowers who is permitted to figure at the Paris races), made her appearance wearing the Persian colours, and offered to the Shah a magnificent bouquet of the Persians colours—gardenia, tied with white and red ribands—which the Shah graciously accepted, raising the same repeatedly to his "auguet" nose, and apparently appreciating the delicious odour of the new flower as highly as the compliment implied in the colours of the bouquet. A salvo of applause from the assembled multitude greeted the well-known protégé of the Jockey Club, as she descended the steps of the "Throne," after having offered to the Duchess de Magenta a bouquet of blue, white, and red flowers, the colours of France. On returning from the review, the crowd saluted the Duchess as though she had been an Empress or a Queen—the Duchess bowing gravely and gracefully in return, much as she has so often seen the ex-Empress do in passing over the same line of road, hemmed in by the same crowd of spectators, under similar surroundings. Madame Thiers and her unsparable sister never excited the smallest amount of curiosity or interest in the minds of the Parisians, and might have driven through Paris for a century without receiving a single salutation from the people about them. "Might they not have come in for some such marks of respect," may be the query of some distant reader, "if the visit of the Shah had occurred during Mr. Thiers's occupancy of the Presidential chair?" To which query only one answer can be returned, viz., that the Shah's reception would, or could, have been given to the Persian Sovereign, if M. Thiers and his party had remained in power.

The great night-fête offered by the city of Paris to the Shah was very fine despite the coming on of a horrible rain with a high wind that put out two-thirds of the coloured lamps, and greatly interfered with the brilliant details of some of Ruggiera's greatest inventions. The "Throne-room" erected for the Shah, the Marshal, and his wife, on the Place du Trocadéro, was a most tasteful and elegant structure, so brilliant with lustres, rich hangings, mirrors, &c., that one could hardly believe it to have been reared in a few days for a single evening, and the sight of the great staircase elegantly decorated, like the rest of the Place and the Garden, with coloured lamps, and filled with seats for the happy possessors of tickets entitling them to such close proximity to the guest of the evening was indeed beautiful. The sight of all the public buildings, outlined in jets of gas, was well calculated to reveal to the Shah the vast extent of the town, and those jets of flame, though frequently extinguished by a gust of wind, relighted themselves as soon as the gust had passed, this part of the spectacle was less interfered with than some of its other elements.

Each of the main buildings of the capital was lighted up, one after the other, by a flood of white light thrown upon it by the great electro-lime battery established on the Trocadéro, under the direction of the indefatigable originator of the entertainment. This part of the show appears to have impressed the Shah greatly. He sent for the Prefect of the Seine, and complimented him warmly on the wonderful sight thus offered him, and in general, on the beauty of Paris, and the splendour of its thoroughfares and buildings. "Sire," replied the Prefect, "Your Majesty's approbation would be more justly given to my illustrious predecessor, Baron Haussmann, to whom is due the praise of having traced the splendid design which his successors have only had to carry out in accordance with his plans; and the Baron himself, if he had the honour of receiving the expression of your Majesty's approbation, would, in the same manner, declare that the praise of having carried out that design is justly due to the unrivalled practical skill of M. Alphand, the illustrious and indefatigable engineer of the City of Paris." Whereupon the Shah desired that M. Alphand might be presented to him; and that gentleman, in a working suit of grey cloth, a roll of paper in one hand, and an umbrella in the other, was fain to quit his post of command for a few moments and make his bow to the monarch whose costume was a mass of gems of incalculable value, and whose surrounding, worthy of such a display, were of his own creating. The Shah shook him warmly by the hand, and assured him of extreme pleasure afforded him by the wonderful display he had just witnessed. After which, M. Alphand hurried to his post, a magnificent display of fireworks took place, as well as the wind and rain permitted, and then the march past of 5000 soldiers, with torches, to the tune of bugles calling to quarters. This was the concluding feature of the display, and would have been almost effective than the other portions of the entertainment if it not been for the bad weather, which extinguished the torches long before the fiery snake had wound itself in sight of the tens of thousands of pairs of eyes estaed on the broad slope of the Trocadero.

Despite the bad weather, the mass of sightseers filled the Champ de Mars, the quays, the bridges, and balcony, window, and roof commanding a portion of the display. The eagerness to obtain tickets for the best of a had risen to fever-heat; and all those whose position supposed to give them a chance of exercising any influence on the distribution of the precious talismans have besieged and worried within an inch of their lives.

The State performance at the opera was a brilliant success. The opera-house was splendidly decorated; an area of honour, filled with exotics and lustres, was prepared for the Shah and his suite, and a Royal box, fronted as formerly for the Emperor, received those illustrious people, Marshal MacMahon and the Duchess, and of the Orleans princes, and one or two of the Ministers and deputies.

The Marshal proceeded in state to the residence of the Shah, to conduct his Majesty to the entertainment. The Rue Le Peletier was lined by troops, keeping a clear way for the royal cortége, and the Shah, on alighting, was received by M. Halanzier, the manager, and a few of his principal subordinates, and conducted to a beautiful little dining-room, fitted up for his use, and provided with its choice fruit. It appears that the manager had for a moment the idea of placing on the steps of the grand entrance the prettiest danseuses of his troupe in costume de ballet, with a bouquet in her hand, instead of the regulation-bar, holding a gun. But the brilliant idea was considered as being somewhat too Oriental, and was abandoned. The Shah's admiration for the "big soldiers" of picked "Cuirassier" regiments is so great that he was probably as well pleased to see them again, motionless as statues, in their splendid uniform, as he would have been to see the proposed array of ballet girls in tulle dresses and tiaras.

The renowned "Grand Opera" of Paris never presented a more splendid coup d'œil than on this occasion. The elite of the most elegant and fashionable women of this capital, including nearly all of those who contributed most effectually to the brilliance of similar entertainments under the Empire, dressed with all the taste and splendour that clothes can be made to assume, loaded with diamonds and flowers; of the other sex, all that the capital contains in the way of individuals "distinguished" in the various walks of political, fashionable, artistic, and commercial life, with the diplomatic personages, military and naval "summits," &c., all in the fullest possible toggery, covered with gold lace, and radiant with stars and ribands. The Shah was warmly acclaimed on entering, the entire house rising as he came in. He saluted the assembly several times, with evident admiration of the magnificent spectacle before him; the rows of elegant women, comprising all the beauty and fashion of the hour, seeming to impress him more than anything else, for he pushed up his gold spectacles, and, taking up his opera-glass, passed the splendid display of heads, shoulders, and diamonds slowly in review, turning back every now and then to examine more particularly some one of them whose appearance had struck him more particularly. It is hinted that his Majesty finds it difficult to remember that, in this part of the world, kings are no more at liberty to cultivate the acquaintance of the ladies about him than would be the meanest of his subjects; but as he has taken in an extremely extensive stock of new ideas on nearly every subject, he will probably take away with him a somewhat modified idea of the relations of the sexes and of the part which, with so much advantage to sons, brothers, fathers, and husbands, may be taken by the women of a country in the play of its various social and domestic institutions.

As the Shah cares nothing for music, and is not sufficiently at home in French to appreciate the beauties of language or the delicate pourtrayal of shades of sentiment, the evening's entertainment was a miscellaneous one, consisting of scenes of various operas selected for the beauty of their tableaux, and especially of their scenes of dancing, of which the Shah is extremely fond. Having learned in the interval between two scenes that the Duke de Nemours was in the royal box, he requested that his highness might be presented to him. The Duke, informed of the Shah's desire, stepped forward for that purpose, but just at that moment the curtain rose disclosing a ballet scene of such brilliance and beauty that the Shah, taking up his glass, was instantly lost to everything but the splendour of the spectacle before him, forgetting his message to the Duke, who waited for an instant at his side, and then, with an expressive smile, stepped quietly back to his seat beside the Marshal.

On the Shah's arrival, the women of fashion here had for a long time an idea of wearing no jewels at all in presence of the possessor of the unrivalled treasures of that nature possessed by him, replacing their poor little stocks of gems, a "mere nothing," in comparison with his, by flowers. But other counsels finally prevailed; and it was determined to wear everything in the shape of jewels that could be mustered for the occasion. This resolve has given the Shah the opportunity of making acquaintance with the exquisite use made of very small diamonds, &c., by the Paris jewellers, whose mode of setting enables them to produce, out of comparatively cheap materials, ornaments which are, as such, infinitely more effective than that produced by the most enormous stones set with the barbaric simplicity prevalent in the East. The Shah, covered with bands, chains, strings of diamonds, rubies, emeralds, sapphires, topazes, pearls, &c., of enormous size, any one of which would be nominally an object of sale, worth scores, or even hundreds, of the brooches, necklaces, bracelets, sprays, &c., worn with Western dames are so proud, is often, when under a bright sun, as at the review, or in the full blaze of gaslight, as at the opera, so dazzlingly brilliant an object that the eye becomes tired of looking at him; for he has with him between two and three millions sterling of enormous stones, and puts on, at times, as many as the upper part of his person can be made to carry. But for beauty of workmanship and for amount of effect at a given amount of outlay the big stones are outvalled by the exquisitely arranged smaller ones which make up the staple of Western jewel boxes.

From the point of view of artistic ornamentation, it may indeed be laid down as an axiom, that the true use of big diamonds is to embrace the brilliance and effect of an elegantly disposed arrangement of small ones; for no set of ornaments composed entirely of large stones can ever be made to produce the effect of elegance, beauty, and brcemingness produced by the exquisite setting of small diamonds, with a judicious introduction of larger ones, which is the distinguishing triumph of modern jewellery in the West.

The Shah is quite too good an observer not to have detected this fact; and he accordingly took a morning to visit the shops of the principal jewellers of this city, who, being apprised beforehand of his intention to pass their stocks in review with a probability of purchasing, outdid themselves in the variety and beauty of the objects laid before him. After having visited the Palais Royal, and the other principal jewellers, he selected a bracelet of 82,000, francs which he has presented to Mdme. MacMahon, a magnificently-jewelled sword and scabbard for her husband, and various other objects intended for gifts to persons in Europe. But a large proportion of the jewellery bought by him in this city, and amounting to some £25,000, is intended for the ladies of his harem—his purchase of a magnificent tiara of diamonds being probably intended for the reigning favourite, whoever she may be.

The Shah evidently loves jewels as a "hobby"—as a rich Dutch burgher loves tulips; as the late Nestor Roqueplan loved warming-pans; as collectors of every kind love pictures, arms, medallions, &c. Everything he possesses is stuck full of jewels. His coffee and tea pots, his saddle and housings, are a glitter of gems; his pipe, with its bowl of massive gold and its stem of one piece of amber, is set all over with rubies and brilliants, the whole weighing somewhat over three pounds. And so on with every object employed by him in the uses of daily life.

His visit here has been fully occupied, and he has "done the lions of the town" so thoroughly that he must have taken away a tolerably full remembrance of the same, which, aided by a large collection of photographs, will no doubt bring him often back, in spirit, now that he seems which he has been witnessing for the last ten days. He has visited the Invalides, the Gobelins, the Museum of Arts and Trades, the Louvre (the statuary department of which he visited at night, the statues being illuminated by a limelight, producing a most charming effect), the Cathedral of Notre Dame, with the embroidered and jewelled vestments and other objects contained in its "treasury," the honours of the establishment being done by the Archbishop at the head of a brilliant following of priests, all in their grandest robes, during which visit the Shah compared the doctrines of Christ and the "Prophet" in the terms which he showed him to know more about the former than the priests do of the latter, and courteously corrected one of them who spoke of "Mohomet," by turning to him and saying, "Not so; Mohammed." He has been to the principal printing establishment, the Museum of the Garden of Plants, the Observatory, &c.; his last visit being to the Mint, whose arrangements he declared to be superior to those of the Mints of Berlin and London, was astounded at the quantity of ingots of gold and silver ready for minting, and the perfection of the machinery, and had the pleasure of witnessing the striking off, and taking away with him, three coins—one being a beautiful medal, with inscriptions in French and in Persian, in honour of his visit. He has had the articles in the Paris newspapers concerning him and his doings regularly read to him in Persian; laughed heartily over the Persian address of welcome printed in the Figaro the day of his arrival, and which, though quite correct, having been printed from a photograph, was transposed from left to right; has made a variety of shrewd remarks and a good many mild puns, all of which have been duly reported and eagerly read by what that popular journal styles "the population of his good city of Paris;" has graciously received the Diplomatic Body, with the Nuncio at their head as spokesman, and deliverer of compliments and welcomes from the representatives of "Christian" Powers to this head of one-half of the Mahometan "misbelievers;" has given audiences to all members of the Persian Order of the Lion and the Sun now in this city; has also received with much kindness and courtesy the deputation of Hebrews, with Baron Alphonse de Rothschild at their head, who came to beg him to protect their co-religionists in Persia, which he promised to do; and has had a sail in one of the tiny steamboats that ply on the Seine, called "Flies," tastefully decorated for his use.

The evening's entertainment at the Palace of the Elysée has worthily wound up the series of beautiful and striking fêtes got up in his honour, and which have undoubtedly had the advantage of proving to Paris that it can still be the brilliant metropolis of other days, if it so wills it. The improvements of the Elysée during the late reign have made it the most elegant and beautiful of all the royal dwellings of France; so that the Duchess, on taking up her abode there, with her husband, a few days beforehand, in order to ensure the completeness and perfection of the fête to be given there, had little to do beyond filling the rooms with rare flowers, and fitting up a boudoir with the Persian colours, for the special use of the expected guest.

The beautiful little palace and gardens were lit up with lights of every kind and colour, producing the peculiar effect of picturesqueness, lightness, and elegance, usually described as "fairy like." Three thousand persons had received the following card; not one of which, as will be readily believed, was allowed to remain unused:—

"H. M. the Shah of Persia having been graciously pleased to accept the invitation addressed to him, the President of the Republic and Madame la Maréchale de Mac Mahon request ——— to be present at the evening's entertainment, which is to be given in his Majesty's honour at the Palace of the Elysée, on Tuesday, July 15, 1873, at half-past nine.

"This card must be delivered up on entering."

Besides these cards, a general invitation had been sent to M. Buffet, inviting all the Deputies who might wish to come. The crowd of guests was such that it was found necessary to light up, hastily, the floor above the one in which the fête was supposed to be given, and which was speedily filled as full as were the rooms below. Nothing could be more successful in its way than this entertainment; and the Shah evidently enjoyed it thoroughly, walking more than once through the rooms, admiring them, and the company, with the charming Duchess on his arm. The ladies were in full splendour; the fireworks went off admirably; and the Shah and his suite were profuse in their expressions of wonder and delight. All the Ambassadors came in their State carriages; and everything passed as it would have done under a monarchy, to the expressed satisfaction of all present.

It will not improbably be found that this unexpected re-awakening of monarchical ideas and sympathies has done something to upset the hold which demagogic ideas had taken on the mind of Paris.

THE ULTRAMONTANES AND CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

The struggle between the Ultramontanes and the Civil Government is now fairly inaugurated over a great part of Europe, and the former feel that they are daily losing ground. The German Government is resolute in its determination to compel its Roman Catholic subjects, of every grade, to yield the same obedience to the laws of the country as is paid by all the rest of its subjects; and as the very essence of "justice" and "liberty," as understood and claimed by Ultramontanes, is the enjoyment of privileges and immunities incompatible with the supremacy of Civil law, they are crying out bitterly against the "persecution" which is depriving them of the exceptional position which they regarded as their right. The refractory Bishops who have persisted in promulgating tenets and inculcating ideas diametrically opposed to the supremacy of the Civil power, and to the equality of all creeds in the eye of the law, have just lost their suit against the Government for recovery of their suspended salaries; the laws against the Jesuits have been extended to the numerous and powerful Rommist communities of "Lazarists," "Priests of the Holy Spirit," and "Society of the Sacred Heart of Jesus," which, as being affiliated to the Jesuits, are to be closed in six months. The Government has instituted fresh proceedings against the refractory dignitaries who demand to take their orders only from Rome, and the Archbishop of Cologne, with the Bishops of Treves and Ermeland, are about to be brought to trial for acts of insubordination, while the Curate of Guelldres has been dismissed from his post for having refused to read on the occasion of the death of Prince Adalbert, official prayers appointed to be read after the death of any member of the Imperial Family. In Switzerland, the moderate Catholics make common cause with the other denominations against the Ultramontanes, who are striving to get up a new war for the triumph of Rome. In Austria, the powerful speech lately made by M. Déak in the Hungarian Parliament has given the deathblow to the Jesuits. The only crumbs of comfort that fall to Rome at present come from France, where clericalism is growing demonstrative, from Spain where it is hoped the Carlism may be recovering ground for the Inquisition, and from England, which is believed to be rapidly returning into the bosom of Papacy.

THE GERMAN EVACUATION OF FRENCH TERRITORY.

Meantime the evacuation of the French territory is taking place rapidly and in perfect order, thanks to the excellent spirit which has always animated the commander-in-chief of the German army of occupation, and of the Count de St. Vallier, the French Commissary-General in the district occupied by the German forces. Those two gentlemen have devoted their energies to the difficult task of rendering the occupation as little onerous as possible to all concerned; and it may be safely asserted that if the excellent spirit of conciliation, forbearance, tact, intelligent forethought and determination to avoid all and every pretext for anger by a steady effort to make the best of everything, which have animated these two accomplished and admirable men, could be brought generally to bear in the settlement of international differences of interest and opinion, we should never again have to deplore the hideous horrors and unspeakable miseries of the stupid and brutal crimes against earth and heaven which an insane planet dignifies with the appellation of "glorious war." Thanks to the persevering efforts of these personages, the evacuation of the occupied districts, and the re-occupation of the same by the French troops (who are marched in, on each point, a few hours after the departure of the Germans), is everywhere taking place without the occurrence of a single uncomfortable incident. Much praise is due to the admirable self-command with which the population of the occupied districts has seconded the efforts of the Commissary-General,—allowing their unwelcome guests to depart in perfect silence, and with no gesture indicative of the intense satisfaction with which they witness this departure. To the Germans, on the other hand, must be awarded the praise of having abstained from everything that could tend to aggravate the humiliation and annoyance of their presence among the excitable people they have had to hold in check, and for quitting the French soil without any unseemly manifestations of their joy at being released from an onerous duty. It may be remembered that Count de Saint-Vallier, at the banquet lately offered to General de Manteuffel, stated at Nancy, yesterday acknowledged the general admiration excited by the manner in which the General had discharged the delicate and difficult duty laid upon him. In a similar spirit, the General, in quitting France, has sent a sum of 20,000 francs to the Mayor of Nancy, for distribution among the poor of the town; and the Emperor of Germany has written to the Count de Saint-Vallier, thanking him for the attention given by him to German soldiers suffering from sunstroke.

SPAIN.

Rumour is again busy with the name of the young Prince of Hohenzollern, who is supposed to be still willing to assume the thorny crown of Spain, and to have a numerous party desirous to see him do so. It is said that the excesses of the Republican volunteers on the one hand, and of the Carlist troops on the other, have determined a revulsion of sentiment among a large class of the Spanish people; and that the desire of a strong and stable Government has led this class of the Spanish people to look out eagerly for a King likely to give to Spain the blessing of such a Government, without the danger of clerical domination, and without the establishment of the absolutism which would certainly follow the elevation of Don Carlos to the throne of Spain. The news of the capture, by the German frigate the Friedrich Karl off Carthagena, of a Spanish vessel manned by insurgents, has naturally been construed as indicating an intention on the part of Germany to favour the candidature of the German Prince to the vacant throne; but as the vessel in question is now said to have carried a red flag belonging to no maritime nation, and placing it in the category of "pirate" adventurers which would be treated by the navies of Europe as such, power, it is difficult to draw any conclusion from the incident in question. The fact is that the Cosas de Espagna are at present a hopeless puzzle to the Spaniards themselves; and although lookers-on are popularly believed to see more of a game than the players, it is absolutely impossible to know anything of what may, or may not, be on the cards for the future of the rich, beautiful, distracted Iberian Peninsula.

THE CLOSING OF THE FRENCH PARLIAMENT.

The French Parliament, after some more stormy sittings, has dispersed for its summer holidays, leaving a Committee of Permanence to keep watch and ward over Government and people. One of the stormiest of the late sittings was that in which a battle-royal was fought between Right and Left relative to the authority to be attributed to the Committee in the matter of prosecutions of the Press and members of the Assembly charged with trenching on forbidden ground; a large majority voting full powers to the Committee for opposing the revolutionary propaganda during the parliamentary vacation. The message of President MacMahon, declaring the session at an end, and briefly resuming the salient points of the general situation of French affairs, and promising to maintain order during the absence of the Assembly, has had the rare good fortune to win the praise of all parties. The Marshal says, among other things, and truly, that the liberation of the country from foreign occupation is not, as certain interested adulators have represented it to be, the work of any one man, but is "the common work of the patriotism of all;" and that, although "fortunate negotiations of M. Thiers contributed powerfully to prepare it," the success of those negotiations was due to the patience and fortitude with which the country has been enabled, "through the policy of the Assembly, at once prudent and firm," to bear the heavy burdens laid upon it by the necessities of the situation. He declares that "parties have disappeared as fractions, amalgamating in the common sentiment of social preservation, and concludes by referring to the accord, now happily established, not only between the Chamber and the Government, but between the different elements of the Chamber among themselves;" and declaring that the forgetting of internal differences to think only of the general interests of France" is the great duty of all at the present time, and the pivot on which the general action should turn.

THE BONAPARTISTS.

The Bonapartists have had a quiet little demonstration; the notabilities of that party, to the number of some 500, having gone to the little church in the village of St. Leu, to attend the annual commemorative mass celebrated there on the anniversary of the death of King Louis of Holland, father of Napoleon III. In spite of the distance, and the extreme heat, most of the leading personages of the party were there—including Prince Joachim Murat, Marquis de Bassano, with his rich Canadian wife (Miss Symes), Charles Abbatucci, General de Castelnau, Dr. Conneau, &c. Princess Mathilde, being unwell, was represented by Baroness de Galbois. Some old soldiers of the First Empire, a number of officers, and of workmen, &c., were also present, with bouquets of violets in their button holes, so that the little church, densely filled, was redolent of the Imperial flower. Prince Napoleon, though in Paris (having returned to this city with a view to procuring the official recognition of his rank as a general of the French army), was not present at the celebration, probably considering it more prudent to avoid making himself prominent at the present time.

THE LEGITIMISTS, BONAPARTISTS, AND REPUBLICANS OF FRANCE.

The Assembly being dispersed to the four quarters of France, and the public mind being thus set free to look out for news wherewith to replace the daily chronicle of Parliamentary quirkets, is just now specially occupied with the visit of the Count de Paris, the Count de Chambord, and the approaching trial of Marshal Bazaine, on charges which, by the military laws of France, entail, if proved, degradation and dismissal from the army, and even capital punishment.

The evident setting in of a current of opinion in favour of a return to monarchical institutions naturally exasperates the Republican party; but the present President of the Republic is determined to allow no favour to the advocates of revolution; and, consequently, the Radicals are reduced for the time being to an attitude of expectancy by no means satisfactory to themselves. On the other hand, Legitimists, Orleanists, and Bonapartists are more excited and more active than ever; and the journey of the Count de Paris to Kobedorff is the theme of general comment in the monarchical Press, though nothing is known as to the real intentions of the Count de Paris in making this visit. The friends of the latter assert that the son of the Duke of Orleans, on whom his father by his will enjoined "fidelity to the principles of the revolution," is as firmly determined to abide by the Tricolour Flag and the cause of constitutional government which it symbolises, as is the Count de Chambord to bring back the White Flag and the principle of the Divine Right of Kings symbolized by it; and it is generally expected, by those who claim to see the farthest into this particular "millstone," that the interview between the two "august" cousins will be strictly maintained within the limits of an "affectionate" family reconciliation, in which all allusion to political differences will be carefully avoided, both cousins being tacitly agreed in "the determination to await the action of the Assembly, leaving to that body the task of initiating the movement which may be destined to place the thorny crown of Saint Louis" on one or the other of their brows. The friends of both parties are unwilling with equal anxiety the transmission of some certain news in regard to the interview, and though the Republican prints affect to regard the whole affair as a pastility unworthy to interest an intelligent democracy, the anger and anxiety evident in their discursings on the subject, are a sufficient proof of the importance they really attach to the fact of a reconciliation between the rival branches of the old royal house.

On their side, the Bonapartists are as evidently disgusted with the march thus stolen upon them by the chiefs of the two parties with whom they made common cause in ejecting M. Thiers; and they are now demanding, more strenuously than ever, the appeal to the country which the majority of the Assembly is more than ever determined not to permit. Altogether, the mass of the people only desiring quiet, is greatly troubled by the apprehension of coming struggles between parties whose pretensions are absolutely irreconcilable, while neither is strong enough to secure peace to the country by imposing its own choice on its opponents.

THE TRIAL OF MARSHAL BAZAINE.

As for the trial of Marshal Bazaine on the charge of betrayal of duty by surrendering to the enemy while he still possessed the means of holding out against him, the affair seems destined to assume very large proportions, to bring the immense number of the actors in the late war before the gaze of public curiosity, and to give rise, incidentally, to a good deal of the scandal in which that curiosity especially delights. The report of General Rivière, on the question of the Marshal being brought to trial, fills four octavo volumes. The first sets forth the grounds of the indictment; the second treats of the artillery; the third goes into the matter of provisions; the fourth deals with communications between various places. The Marshal is said to be accused, among other things—first, of having capitulated to the enemy, and surrendered the fortress of Metz, without having exhausted all his means of defence (in point of fact, however, it was not the Marshal, but General Coffinières, who held chief command in "the virgin fortress"); second, of having signed in the field a capitulation, of which the result was to make his troops lay down their arms without having, both verbally and in writing, done all that duty and honour prescribed in this doing—both of which offences entail the penalty of death. The Marshal is devoting himself to the study of the report with a diligence and thoroughness sufficiently indicative of the seriousness of the danger in which he regards himself as standing, and is preparing his defence with proportional care. Among the other witnesses he will call for his defence is Prince Frederick Charles, the terrible "Red Prince," who played so great a part in the terrible events of the late colossal struggle, and who, it is understood, will send written testimony of vital importance to the defence.

PRINCE NAPOLEON.

Prince Napoleon is claiming to be recognised as a General of Division of the French Army, and as the Minister of War, in reply to his demand of recognition, recommends the Prince to apply to the Council of State, he has now written to Marshal MacMahon as the head of the French army, setting forth his rights, and asking for recognition of them. The Prince states that he was made General of Division by two decrees of the late Emperor, one dated Febuary 24, 1853, the other, March 9, 1854; that he commanded a division in the Crimea, co-operating in the victories of the Alma and Inkermann, and commanded a corps d'armée in Italy, fighting by the side of MacMahon, by whom was signed the last order on the service received by him, at Chalons, 1870. "In a word," says the Prince in his letter, "my appointment is as regular as that of any other general or marshal; in support of my claim I invoke only military laws, which guarantee to any officer a right to his grade. You kindly offered me your devoted aid when I was Minister for Algeria and the colonies; you were a witness at the birth of my children; those recollections assure to me your good will. . . . . I repeat that I am a General of Division; I appeal to you for justice; confiding in your equity, I ask you to acknowledge my rank, by subjecting me to military laws and regulations." To this letter, which was signed "Napoleon (Jerome), General of Division," was appended a copy of the Imperial decree of the 9th March, 1854, confirming the Prince's nomination to the rank of General of Division. We are curious to see what reply will be made to the Prince's letter by the Marshal, who has just gone to Calais to be present at some experiments in artillery; his wife and family, like "everybody else," having gone to take a "season" of mineral waters at one of the favourite drenching-places.

COTTON SHEDS.—Entered Outwards, September 29: Hero (s.), 481 bags, Captain Logan, for Auckland; Allen Marrie, brig, 180 bags, Captain Stewart, for New Caledonia; Nourmahal, schooner, 148 bags, Captain Cooper, for New Caledonia; City of Adelaide (s.), 284 bags, Captain Walker, for Melbourne; Cambroia, 400 bags, Captain Taylor, for London; Corinda, barque, 450 bags, Captain Lamont, for Hobart Town; Lady Young (s.), 451 bags, Captain Hill, for Brisbane.

The Lady Young (s.) left Brisbane on Saturday, 27th instant, at 5.15 noon, cleared Moreton Bay by 10 o'clock. Passengers same day at 4 p.m., passed Sandy Cape on Sunday at 3 p.m., and from Hightone on Monday at 8 a.m., arriving in Sydney, same day at 11 a.m. Had variable winds and fine weather throughout the passage.

The Brisbane, schooner, which has arrived from Kiaparn with a full cargo of timber, has had strong westerly and S.W. winds throughout the passage.

The Odalisk, a fine schooner of 171 tons, arrived in port yesterday morning from Adelaide, bringing a full cargo of wheat and flour. She took her departure on the 18th instant, and the last we sighted against E. and N.W. winds.

The clipper schooner Tarapin, chartered by the Missionary Society, returned yesterday from her last voyage, and being a colonial-built craft, it is gratifying to learn from her commander, Captain Jenkins, that she has proved herself facilitous both as a good sea boat and for quick speed. On her forward passage down to the New Hebrides, she made the run in 8 days, and her by throughout the trip shows some admirable sailing—it looks on a wind and 10 knots with a few fathoms. With respect to the present trip, she left Anatiuum, New Hebrides, 12th instant, at 11.30 a.m., carrying light southerly winds to the 16th, when the wind shifted to the northward, veering light from that point to the 18th, on which date the barometer fell to 29.74, with a dark dirty-looking sky, denoting a gale, which broke over the ship at midnight, attended with vivid lightning and torrents of rain. The gale lasted till the 23rd, a strong sea running at the time. The schooner was kept under lower fore-sail and double-reefed mainsail, and behaved admirably. On the 23rd the gale took off, and Howard Island was sighted, and the wind falling to a calm, she lay within 3 miles of the island for three days. The wind then sprang up from the north-west, and continued to arrival. H.M.S. Rayard was at the New Hebrides on 12th August.

The Maitland (s.) arrived from the Hunter River at 5.45 p.m. yesterday.

The Governor Blackall (s.), left Rockhampton at noon on Friday, the 26th instant; cleared Keppel Bay at 5.40 p.m., passed Cape Moreton at 3.30 a.m. on Sunday, Sandy Cape at 9.30 a.m. on Monday, Port Stephens at 1.45 p.m., same day, and arrived in Sydney same evening, at 10.15 p.m. She had S.E. and easterly wind to the Richmond, and afterwards light southerly and variable wind to Seal Rock Point, and strong S.E. winds and one the remainder of the passage. Passed for Brisbane (s.) at 7 a.m. on Sunday, north of Sandy Point, and the City of Brisbane (s.) at 8.30 a.m. same day, north of Cape Byron.

The Kembla (s.) left Brisbane yesterday afternoon for Sydney.

ARRIVAL OF THE BARQUE LADY BOWEN, FROM BOWEN.—The barque arrived in port on Sunday afternoon, 28th instant, after a fair passage of 7 days, passed Sandy Cape at 8.30

THE LATE SIR ROBERT MACKENZIE.—The Brisbane Courier gives the following sketch of Sir R. Mackenzie, who died in London on the 19th instant:—The late baronet spent the greater and more eventful period of his life in this and the neighbouring colony of New South Wales, he having emigrated to Australia when a very young man. For many years he held Clifton station, in the New England district, in conjunction with Mr. Donaldson, of Sydney, and afterwards on his own account. When the discovery of gold greatly increased the value of pastoral properties in Queensland, and leased the Bonnybah station, in the Burnett district, an interest in which, we believe, he held up to the time of his departure from the colony. During his residence in Queensland, Sir Robert always took an active interest in public affairs, and may be said to have been an ardent politician. He was one of the leaders in the Separation agitation, and when the portion of Australia was created an independent colony, he was, at the first general election which took place, chosen as one of the representatives for the Burnett, and continued to hold that position until he left the colony. He was Colonial Treasurer in the first Administration which was formed by Mr. Herbert, in May, 1860, and held office until August, 1863, when he resigned the Treasurership, and was succeeded by Mr. T. De Lacy Moffatt. Upon the formation of a Ministry by Mr. Macalister in February, 1866, Sir R. Mackenzie again entered office as Colonial Secretary. This Administration was defeated on a proposition to introduce a system of what were popularly termed "greenbacks" to ward off the money pinch then existing, and resigned on July 20 in the same year. When the third Parliament was opened on August 7, 1867, Sir R. Mackenzie brought forward a motion adverse to the Macalister Government then in power, and although this was negatived by a majority of 16 to 14, Mr. Macalister thought proper to retire from office, and the mover of the amendment was sent for to form a Ministry. In the new Government the deceased gentleman held the post of Colonial Treasurer and Premier. A vote of want of confidence was carried during the next session, but the Ministry held office until the arrival of the new Governor (Colonel Blackall), who, on the advice of his Ministers, dissolved Parliament. The new Parliament met in November, 1868, and a vote of censure on the Ministry only being negatived by the casting vote of the Speaker, they resigned office. In the following April Sir R. Mackenzie resigned his seat for the Burnett in his succeeding to the baronetcy by the death of his brother William. The late baronet was always considered a kind-hearted genial man, and by his many amiable qualities created for himself a large circle of private friends who will sincerely regret his death. When he left this colony he was hearty, hale, and vigorous, and seemed to have a long lease of life before him. No doubt a residence of over thirty years under the genial climate of Australia unfitted him for the rigours of winter weather in the north of Scotland, and to this sudden change may be ascribed his failing health and early death. Having only entered on his sixtieth year, he could hardly be termed an old man. The baronetcy is a very old one, having been created in 1673, and the late Sir Robert was the ninth baronet. The baronial seat is at Coul, Rossshire, in the north of Scotland. He will be succeeded by his eldest son Arthur, who is now a boy of about 10 years of age.

A CHASE AFTER A SUPPOSED CRIMINAL.—Senior Constable Hayes, of Rutherwood (writes the Goulburn Advertiser) has just successfully performed one of the most arduous tasks that has ever fallen to the lot of a member of the Victorian police force. After a ride on horseback, rail, and coach, over plains, rivers, and hills, extending, it is computed, over a thousand miles of territory, and performed within the past ten days, he has captured an offender who has been wanted for upwards of fourteen years. It appears that in 1859 a highway robbery under arms was committed at Stony Creek. The offender, having taken £8 from a miner, left his swag behind him, from the contents of which it was ascertained that his name was Josiah Robe, the son of a watchmaker at one time carrying on business in Melbourne. Ten days ago senior-constable Hayes was at the Tarrinia, when he heard of a person answering the description of the highwayman being in the Murray district. He at once started in pursuit, but found considerable difficulty in tracking Robe on account of the various aliases he had assumed. He proceeded first to Echuca, thence to Mount Hope, Hamilton, Heywood, and finally found the individual of whom he was in quest at Taylor's Ferry, near Portland, on the borders of South Australia. Robe, who had adopted the names of Alfred Jones and Edward Jones, was arrested, and taken to Hamilton, where he was brought before the bench and remanded to Geelong. The prosecutor has also been found; and it is probable that the prisoner, who has arrived at the goal here, will be brought up at the police court in the course of a day or two.

THE INQUEST ON THE LATE R. B. HILL, P.M., OF GRAFTON.—The Observer of the 27th reports that an inquest was held at the Mountain View Hotel, a few miles from Grafton, on Thursday, September 25, on the body of Mr. R. B. Hill. Mary Hill, daughter of deceased, deposed to having seen him lying in the garden at 5 p.m. of Saturday; he was not used alive afterwards; he was very weak and unwell, for some time past; he was up the road for a few minutes previous to my seeing him in the garden. George Stokes deposed: Deceased has been in bad health for the last six weeks; he was hamstrung but required looking after; I and an aboriginal examined the river bank carefully, but could find no tracks whatever; when the body was found was the most likely place for some distance where any one could well walk down the bank. By jury: The beach only showed above the water; the body was not floating much; he had no knife or my knife on him the day last. James Houlsom: I have been the medical attendant of Captain Hill for three years; I have examined the body; there are some scars of long standing, but no external injuries of importance visible; he has been ill a long time with liver complaint, from which weakness of mind has resulted; he was not likely to commit suicide, or to be violent, but was restless and fond of wandering about; he was very feeble and latterly unable to swim from weakness; the body appears to have been in the river three or four days, and presents the appearance of death by drowning. Verdict—"Drowned in the Clarence River about the night of Sunday, 21st September, but how he came in the river the evidence does not show."

A LAND SPECULATOR TAKEN IN.—A New South Wales Bourke journal observes:—One of the Melbourne speculators visited Hay last week to do a little business in the Government land sale there. He had, as these men do, sent ahead some thousands of pounds to the local bank to pave the way for his good intentions. There were many thousands of acres for sale by auction at the Grongal run, owned by the Messrs. Learmonth, and the Hay-race were on the qui vive, anticipating a sensatory bumper encounter between the Melbourne man of money and the squatter, the former having, as usual, secured his services, &c. &c., for a consideration, to his squatter's agent, who, hailing from Auld Scotland, knew a thing or two. As each lot was put up, upset price (12s. per acre) was bid for the man in possession, which Melbourne "nailed." But there happened to be some of the late mere scrub, fit for short-horning greenhorns in wet weather, but in dry seasons they were so many claypans. In fact, this ground was dear at 5s. per acre, but to the squatter leasing it, he could afford to give 1s. for 12s. an acre. Melbourne dropped in for several of these lots, and after the sale was over and he had paid about £300 (upset money, he went hawking about the land, but no one would buy, so he left, Hay a sadder, and we hope, a wiser man. He had travelled 200 miles in search of wool, and had to return 300 miles (there). Non compte le bien.

COFFEE AND MILK.—One of the most agreeable beverages, at least in the morning, is a morning cup of coffee with its accompaniments of boiled milk—the French never use milk uncooked—and a hot, tray roll, you enjoy it either when making your toilette, opening your letters, or consuming the morning papers. Dr. Marchand, of Metzingen, a distinguished chemist, while admitting that taking separately nothing can be more nutritive than milk or coffee, yet united they are but leather and pumice, as they produce two compounds utterly indigestible. The coffee, dark in tannin, seizes on the albumen and casein of the milk, converting them into a leather powder; the charge being chemically the same as when tannin operates on hides. The gastric juice is powerless in the presence of this tan-browned cup of café-au-lait. Does the reasoning apply to tea and milk—since there is but little difference between the native principles of coffee and tea?

A NOVEL CLAIM.—The Oozmabrahran correspondent of the Dubbo Dispatch reports that an important, though rather an uncommon, case came before the Police Magistrate last week, in which one George Saxon sued one Samuel M'Kellar for harbouring and employing his son, a minor, thereby depriving him of his services, which he valued at 20s. per week. The plaintiff, on oath, stated that his son had left his home on the 24th July without any cause, and went to live at defendant's. That he served defendant with a notice on the 30th July, but no notice was taken of the same, and his son continued in the employ, and lived with the defendant up to September 1st. He, therefore, claimed 30s. a week for the whole time that his son had been in the defendant's employ as compensation for the loss he had sustained. After several witnesses had been called by the defendant to prove that the demand was excessive, the Bench decided that the plaintiff could only recover from the date of serving notice, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff for one month's wages, at the rate of 12s. per week.

INTERCOLONIAL RIFLE MATCH.—The following is a subscription list for the purpose of providing Victorian small-bore rifles to change competitors to proceed to Melbourne in November next. The distance were on each occasion 200 yards, five shots at each, with the one sighting shot. Three members are list for the place of secretary man, and it has been arranged that it shall be decided at the Association meeting when shooting in the All-comers Match:—

Morning Star G. M. Co.—The mining manager reports:—"I write to explain all that I know of the reef we have cut, deferring my regular report till Tuesday or Wednesday, when I hope to know more about it. The night before last we touched what appeared to be a lead running in the right direction, and suggesting the close proximity of a reef. Yesterday we proved it to be a reef; we put a drill through it, and it seems about eight inches thick. I washed the drillings, could see no gold, but found a quantity of pyrites. As soon as we can strip it we shall break it down, and I will send further particulars. In the meantime, I look on this as most encouraging, and hope that within the 60 feet of next contract we shall get payable stone."

New Tumbarumba G. M. Co.—The mining manager reports that the crushing of 125 tons of the Company's stone (four week's work) yielded 76 ounces of retorted gold. Still continuing to mine stone; about 60 tons now at grass.

Ancient Briton Tin Co.—The following is a copy of telegram received from the mining manager, dated September 29:—"7 tons tin left the mine last Friday, £9 per ton. Since my last obtained 3 tons tin. Weather fine, better supplied with labour than usual."

Rapps G. M. Co.—The mining manager reports, under date 27th September, as follows:—"We drove the westerly drive 6 feet further this week—making a total length of 20 feet. Cut a vein with 27 feet, 2½ inches thick, but no gold visible, and are in slate again."

St. Matthewson's G. M. Co.—The mining manager reports, under date 27th September, as follows:—"The main shaft has been sunk three feet during the fortnight, making it 310 feet deep; no vein has been broken down in it yet. The drive north is now in about 60 feet from the shaft, the vein still unsettled, showing gold, but will, I fear, scarcely be found payable. Stoping out on the vein behind the shaft still goes on, but as we rise up the gold does not show so freely as before. Have started a drive west to cut the next westerly vein, which I expect to do in about five feet more. Stone now at grass about 40 tons."

Aurelian Q. M. Co.—The manager, under date of September 22nd, advises:—"During the past week the tunnel has been extended 10 feet, making a total of 114 feet from our northern boundary. We have now got water in the reef and it has got a good deal smaller, about 2 feet wide, and a better defined. The prospect does not improve yet, although it looks more favourable now than it has done since we started at work in this part of the mine."

CARPENTERS AND JOINERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you allow me space in your valuable journal to reply to a letter headed "Mr. Mort and the Carpenters and Joiners' Society of Sydney," which appeared in last Friday's Herald. The secretary of the above society (Mr. M'Lean) says that Mr. Mort had slightly gone off his track in making the assertions he did about the joiners of Sydney, and that he had evidently been misinformed when he asserted that the advance of wages asked for was "an advance upon an advance." In pointing this out as an error in Mr. Mort's speech, they slander the principal employer of this city as building contractor—Mr. John Young. It is not true that Mr. Young has had carpenters and joiners this last four years who have not received an advance in their wages. I assert that I have paid an advance in wages at one contract, and that I have paid a second advance on the same contract. This is "an advance upon an advance." Mr. Mort observes that the alteration was without an hour's notice. It is true that no alteration was contemplated until some ten days prior to the receipt of their demand. It is not correct to assert that it was in expectation for some months. Small jobbing employers for a particular man adapted to a certain kind of work always go out of the current rate of wages—no doubt less receiving value for value in such a man. The society formed for inferior men to receive pay equal to the most efficient is wrong in the extreme. Skilful artisans in all branches can acquire full pay, irrespective of any such society. Ten days' notice is not of greater value than an hour's notice, when a heavy contract is entered into, and men turn on the employer without a reasonable demand, and this is truly ruinous to any contractor. Mr. Young, it is said, has to produce "a superior class of work." The insinuation in such a remark displays much simplicity on the part of this body of men. Mr. Young has completed in his various contracts "superior work." None here has equalled his gigantic undertakings. The old adage, "What we have done before can be done again," implies that they raised the wages because Mr. Young had a superior work in hand.

Mr. Young is the employer of a great number of artisans in the building line, in its various branches. They mostly belong to trade societies, and the majority of carpenters and joiners are society men. If they divide so against their interest, as evidently they do, they will scatter as they have done before. Most undoubtedly good carpenters and joiners should be paid the same as bricklayers and masons. They require more intellect and expensive tools—but proper notice should be given.

I think any reasonable man can see that men formed to act so must do so without proper consideration. If large contractors, men of capital, coming to this city are to be so complimented with society policy, such gentlemen will bring their own men with them, or send for coolies, as was done in this city before by some firms.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN SANBROOK,
Foreman, &c., for Mr. John Young.

DIAMOND OIL,
112 and over FIRE TEST,
and guaranteed NON-EXPLOSIVE.
We call your attention to this oil, which we recommend for families, being as white as pure spring water, and perfectly free from smoke, smell, or odour issuing from common oils, and burns longer without trimming or crusting the wick than any other.
It is extensively used in Europe (under the brand of Oleophene), where it commands a higher price than any other. The same can unhesitatingly be said of this, the home market, where it has been largely used for mixing with other oils of inferior quality, and by well-known competitive Packers, for the purpose of establishing their brands.
Our DIAMOND BRAND is patented as a Trade Mark, and we, therefore, caution dealers against using the same or cases for repacking inferior oils. We repeat our guarantee as to the quality, and we challenge comparison with any other oil, as we know the Diamond to be the best.

ABERBURNIE ESTATE,
LITTLE COOGEE BAY.

A beautifully situated
MARINE VILLA RESIDENCE, with
TWENTY ACRES OF ORNAMENTAL GROUNDS, which enclose nearly the whole of LITTLE COOGEE BAY. It is distant about three miles from Sydney by a good carriage road to the entrance gates.

ABERBURNIE HOUSE is a commodious Family Residence, containing Hall, Drawing-room, Dining-room, Library, 4 Bedrooms, Kitchen, &c. This residence is in first-class order and repair, the rooms are large and lofty, and the whole is finished in good style, and fitted with every family convenience. Stables, Coachhouse, with loft, Man's Room, and Laundry, are among the Out-offices.

AN UNLIMITED SUPPLY OF PURE SPRING WATER is obtained for the house and out-buildings from a rivulet which passes through the estate, and is forced to the premises by a self-acting hydraulic pump.

THE GROUNDS have an area of 20 ACRES extending to, and enclosing nearly, the whole of the sandy beach to Little Coogee Bay. A carriage drive and avenue is formed through them to the house, and they are otherwise laid out into lawns, shrubbery, orchard, and paddocks—a great number of ornamental trees being planted over the land, giving the whole a beautiful park-like appearance. A constantly running stream broken by several waterfalls passes through the grounds into Little Coogee Bay—an inlet with a fine sheltered sandy beach, where boating, fishing, and sea-bathing can be enjoyed with perfect safety.

Aberburnie is one of Nature's favoured spots, elevated yet sheltered by hills, commanding extensive views, and surrounded by a panorama of most romantic scenery. The whole has an engaging, charming aspect, and more complete park grounds than this estate enjoys cannot well be conceived.

The garden is so well known and enjoys so high a repute for tasteful arrangement and sylvan beauty as to need no comment. Its present perfection is the result of upwards of 20 years' recreative study and labour of an amateur florist and botanist, and the whole is one brilliant mass of magnificent trees and rare shrubs of mature growth, glorious in height, perfect in form, exquisite in symmetry, clumped and clustered together in a most attractive manner, so as to form a broad effective picture, bright with nearly perpetual bloom, delightfully secluded, a perfect landscape within itself. A portion of the terraces is occupied by choice full-bearing fruit trees, and the grounds are enriched by a constant flowing stream, broken by miniature waterfalls.

There is also a small greenhouse, and a stove fitted with hot water pipes to pits, comprising nine glass frames, adapted for the growth of exotic plants. The site of the house is elevated, commanding a fine view of the harbour and surrounding scenery, and the land (upwards of two acres) close to the City boundary, and within walking distance of its business centre, has not only a present, but an immense prospective value.
